GIS DAY 2018

14.11.2018

MINI SEMINAR HALL

Description: GIS Day 2018 is a worldwide event that celebrates the technology of Geographic Information Systems (GIS). Ralph Nader inspired GIS Day as a day for geography awareness. The first-ever GIS Day was held on November 19, 1999, during Geography Awareness Week from November 14-20, 1999.

A geographic information system (GIS) is a system designed to capture, store, manipulate, analyze, manage, and present all types of geographical data. The key word to this technology is Geography – this means that some portion of the data is spatial.

Creating innovative maps and visualizations to tell our clients' spatial stories. Using open source tools has made this possible, giving us an unparalleled level of creative control over design and functionality of our maps, and freedom from the conventions of traditional cartography. In recent years, open source tools have matured, becoming easier to use and more powerful, and opening exciting new frontiers of cartography. In this presentation, I will showcase past and current Stamen projects and talk about the use of an open source design process to help clients see their data with fresh eyes.
